Child Development Program Profile

The Foothill College Child Development Department offers a high-quality program that is designed to deepen understanding of children, their families, and developmentally appropriate practices for children from birth through elementary-school age. College-level coursework is designed to give you the opportunity to gain insight into children's behavior; build relationships with children, families and colleagues, and enhance the learning environment. Student teaching is offered in quality community programs under supervision of mentor teachers and faculty members from the Foothill College Child Development Department.

Foothill College's Child Development program prepares you for success in meeting individual career goals. Courses and specialty career certificates are designed to help you:

- Meet or exceed the hiring requirements required by Title 22 state licensing regulations;
- Complete the requirements needed to obtain California Child Development permits; and
- Prepare to continue your education and earn a bachelor's degree at a four-year university or college.

A student earning an Associate in Arts Degree in Child Development (90 units) may be able to apply child development units toward the lower-division major preparation requirement at a four-year college or university in disciplines such as child development, human development, child psychology, social work and K-12 education. If you intend to transfer, review the specific requirements of the school to which you plan to transfer, and meet early and often with your Foothill College counselor to create your personalized educational plan to ensure that you are on target to achieve your academic goals.

Personal & Professional Qualities

To enjoy a successful, rewarding professional career in the field of early childhood education, you must demonstrate select personal and professional characteristics, including:

- Thorough understanding of child development,
- Knowledge of yourself and a dedication to learning,
- Emotional well-being and physical endurance,
- Creativity and a sense of humor,
- Flexibility and an appreciation of children's learning preferences,
- Ability to articulate clearly verbally and in writing, and
- Commitment to excellence and ongoing professional development.

Rewarding Career Opportunities

Knowledge and an understanding of child development are prerequisites for many careers. Choices may include:

- Teaching in and/or directing a child development program for infants, toddlers, preschoolers, school-age children or children with special needs,
- Operating a family-run child care business,
- Parent/adult educator,
- Childbirth educator,
- Pediatric nurse,
- Child psychologist,
- Educational consultant,
- Elementary-school instructional aide,
- Early interventionist,
- Speech therapist or
- Recreational leader.

Consult with a Foothill College counselor for additional education requirements.

Ensuring Student Success

Our program offers a strong foundation in child development that allows you to bring what you learn in the classroom to your workplace so that you can be a knowledgeable employee and become a leader in our profession and in our community.

Day, night and online classes are scheduled to fit your busy schedule. Weekend and fast-track classes are regularly offered. Classes are held at both the Middlefield Campus and the main campus in Los Altos.

General education classes and Foothill counseling are available at both the Los Altos Campus and Middlefield Campus in Palo Alto. Call (650) 949-6950.

California Child Development Permit Advising is offered to help you earn a permit while you earn units for your certificates of achievement and specialization and complete your AA degree.

The California Early Childhood Mentor Teacher Program is a statewide effort to improve the quality of child care. The program provides professional development opportunities for students who work in a classroom under the direction of a mentor teacher.

Child Development Training Consortium (CDTC) supports professional development through tuition reimbursement and child development application fees. In accordance with the California Commission on Teacher Credentialing and California Department of Education, Foothill College supports your effort to earn a child development permit. For more permit information, access www.childdevelopment.org.

The Early Childhood Leadership Institute supports the professional growth and development of children's program directors and leaders by providing workshops, seminars and bi-quarterly round table support groups.

The Foothill Child Development Club is a student-run organization supporting academic and professional growth through activities and contributions to the Child Development Department and college.
