

DATABASES

Magazine articles that are reproduced in an online database, such as EBSCO Academic Search Premier, are cited like print articles, with additional information added at the end. You need to include the name of the database (in italics), the “medium of publication marker” (e.g. Web) and the date you accessed the database. MLA no longer requires URLs (Web address).

Quinn, Jane Bryant. “No More Financial Katrina.” Newsweek 14 Apr. 2008: 82.

Academic Search Premier. Web. 30 Apr. 2008.

WEBSITE or WEB BASED ARTICLE

Author last name, first name (if given). “Title of the page or article” (if given). Overall website name (if different from title). Name of Publisher or Sponsor of the website, (use N.p. if none given), Date of publication (use n.d. if none given). Medium. Date of access.

Note: MLA does not require that Web citations contain the URL (web address). However, for ease in finding the source, instructors may require the inclusion of a URL. Check with your instructor. If the URL is required, include it in brackets at the end of the citation <URL if required>.

Cooke, Robert. “Impact of Global Warming on Health Debated.” Harvard University Gazette

Online. President and Fellows of Harvard College, 21 Feb. 2008. Web. 30 Apr. 2008.

PARENTHETICAL DOCUMENTATION (Citations in the text)

Citations in the text are a basic part of every research paper. Any time you use a direct quote, paraphrase something, or use a specific idea or fact from your reading, you need to cite the source within the body of your paper. MLA style uses parenthetical citations to refer the reader to the specific item in the “Works Cited” list. If the parenthetical citation is at the end of a sentence, place it before the period. To cite a specific book or article use the author’s last name. If there is no author listed, use the first few words of the title in quotes. To cite a direct quote or give credit for something such as a fact, chart or graph, include the specific page number. When a source has no page numbers or any kind of reference numbers, the work must be cited in the text.

Citing a book or article with an author:	(Quinn)
Citing a specific page, fact or quote:	(Mueller 70)
Citing a source with no author:	(“Red Clay, Blue Hills”)
A source without page numbers:	Johnson indicated a 63% improvement...

WORKS CITED (Bibliographic citations)

All sources used in your research are listed at the end of your paper on a separate page with the heading, Works Cited. This page should be numbered. Each source is listed alphabetically by the author’s last name or the first word of the title, if there is no author or editor. Citation entries are double-spaced. The first line of each entry is not indented, but the rest of the entry is indented a half inch.
