Computer Use Policy

The Foothill College Learning Resource Center (LRC) Tutoring Services provide access to the Internet and other electronic resources via computer workstations in order to support the curriculum at Foothill College and to enhance other academic endeavors. Computers in the LRC Tutoring facilities are intended for academic activities.

Individuals are responsible for using the LRC Tutoring electronic resources in an ethical, non-discriminatory, equitable, and lawful manner. Engaging in any activity that is at variance with these policies and responsibilities can result in the loss of access privileges and/or legal prosecution.

The LRC Tutoring electronic workstations and the materials to which they provide access constitute resources to be shared equitably among registered student users. If and when the number of computer workstations is insufficient to meet demand, the LRC Tutoring staff may, at their discretion, limit individual sessions to academic activity or a certain time period and/or may limit access to those in the primary user group. (Primary users are currently enrolled students, faculty, and staff of Foothill College.)

Compliance with FHDA District Policy

Any student using the machines located in any of the Foothill College Tutoring Facilities needs to be in compliance with the “Misuse of Computer Information and Resources Policy”, found in the Student Handbook (<https://foothill.edu/handbook/>), which includes the District Policy, “ FHDA Board Policy 3250: Computer and Network Use - Rights and Responsibilities ”
