1	anonymous	If there is a way to use a platform that is safe and equitable it would be great to have the exam option.
2	anonymous	I think this is becoming increasingly necessary to maintain academic integrity.
3	anonymous	I think that we need a general proctoring service on our campuses (we use too!), not just for online classes. Every quarter there are several students who need to make-up exams in my in-person classes.

4	anonymous	I appreciate the effort to create a shared network because it could help students who need this service for their class.
5	anonymous	I don't have written exams as part of the clinical courses I teach but this might be a valuable network to join to allow faculty to use proctored services for their online exams.
6	anonymous	I think it's important to have the same requirements for all students in my class. If several students live out of state or are in another country, this proctoring service would not be an option for them. Without an online proctoring option then, I'm unsure how to use this CC proctoring service. Suggestions are welcome.
7	anonymous	I have found in the past that the online proctor was not effective, has the technology somehow improved or is this in person proctoring?
8	anonymous	I think proctored exams could be useful in the short term, but putting our energy into getting away from "traditional" exams is a better long term goal.
9	anonymous	Not having proctored exam created challenge in 2020 quarters. Due to the integrity challenges and the lack of transparency from Proctorio I moved away from exams. However with changes that AI brings into student work, I believe a need for proctored exam in fully online form will allow me to better understand the consistency of student work. However, the format of online proctoring needs to be clear to take advantage.
10	anonymous	This is a no-brainer. We finally have a way to get online students to take proctored exams, which significantly increases academic integrity.
11	anonymous	I'm happy to also provide proctoring for students at other colleges, if that helps in anyway.
12	anonymous	I am very much against online proctoring that polices students, invades student privacy, or increases student anxiety. For those reasons, I have mostly eliminated traditional exams from my courses. If this is some different kind of situation that avoids the above problems, then I might be open to looking at it...though I suspect I would have similar criticisms of this.
13	anonymous	At this time I have no need, may in the future.
14	anonymous	No

15	anonymous	Please advice. I need to decide what proctoring method I am using in my online class. Students are already asking about it for the Winter quarter.
16	anonymous	Thank you for considering a proctoring network! It would be fantastic to have this, not just for a final exam but for every test. This would eliminate one of the biggest obstacles I face whenever I teach online. It also would encourage and motivate students to actually learn the material in a meaningful way, whereas currently I hear a ton of students comment that they "got an A in an online class but didn't learn anything."
17	anonymous	No
18	anonymous	Interested to hear of outcome of survey. Thank you.
19	anonymous	I have never used a proctored service in my online classes, and do feel that I have designed my online assessments in a way to minimize the impact of "cheating,"...up until now. The emergence of ChatGPT, is unfortunately changing the game yet again, and increasing the labor required of me to re-design, and implement even more individualized assessments which I just can't manage with numbers of students in my online classes. I would definitely now consider returning to the "traditional" proctored exam, even though I have serious equity (access) concerns with requiring fully asynchronous online students to take in-person assessments. But unless we can work together (as an institution) to address that issue, rather than it landing solely on individual faculty members to design, administer and grade deeply authentic and individualized assessments...then...well...I throw up my hands in defeat.
20	anonymous	I didn't understand from the description above how it was being proposed to be done.
21	anonymous	I'd be happy to help with proctoring, if needed!
22	anonymous	I have wanted Foothill to join a proctoring network for years. In my opinion this is imperative.
23	anonymous	No.
24	anonymous	I am thinking about how to mitigate the use of chatGPT in my CS classes, but I really don't want to go back to testing.
