I have just returned from seeing Foothill's summer musical, "Violet," a little known production that has a touching story. Here are comments from the San Francisco Bay Area Theatre Critics Circle: " 'It's about the journey, not the destination,'" and Kaylee Miltersen is wonderful in the title role of Violet...Director Milissa Carey makes excellent use of scenic designer Yosuke Soi's sets....In addition to Miltersen, the strength of this production is when the company sings together....The harmonies are brilliant, and they sing with one voice.....The collaboration and cooperation of th entire production team are evident in this show....And it delivers a powerful message that the most painful scars are not always the most visible ones." This is a moving story that involves family dynamics, race, and life in the south in 1964.

It would have been my loss, if I had not seen this show. Hope you will take advantage of your staff tickets and see Violet in the Lohman Theater, it will be well worth your time. You have until August 7. <https://foothill.edu/theatre/productions/violet.html>
